THE ELECTION.

We had intended to offer some speculations upon the result of the recent Presidential Election, but our views and feelings are so fully and satisfactorily expressed in the following article, which we find in the Charleston Mercury of the 13th instant, that we prefer to adopt the same, in lieu of any remarks

" Although the returns are not yet complete, enough has been ascertained, we think, to settle the question, and to render the election of Gen. Taylor to the Presidency a matter of entire certainty. In announcing this result we sincerely wish that we felt that confidence which would enable us to participate in the rejoicing of his friends. Our objections to Gen. Taylor have not been personal, and our support of Gen. Cass has in no sort sprung from personal preference. To the former we have ever given credit for the highest qualities as a soldier, for patriotism, for integrity, and manly simplicity of character. Had it been simply a question of selecting a man to fill the high office of President, whether our choice would or would not have fallen upon General Taylor, we could at least have seen him elevated to that position without envy of his honors, or distrust of his conduct.

"But in these days, it is not men, but parties, that rise or fall in the Presidential election. It is not men, but parties, that are clothed with the Executive power of the Government, and have entrusted to them the destinies of the country. A grand superiorty of mind and will may indeed make the individual man, the virtual master, as well as the ceremonial leader of his party; and where we have full faith in such superiority, we may be justified in separating the leader from the accidents of position, and association, and supporting him purely on personal grounds.

"But we cannot frame a rule on an extraordinary exception In common cases, we must take it for granted that the candidate of a party will be one among a body of competitors; that his fortunate position will be the result of this rivalry, rather than his own acknowledged supremacy; that his rivals for the rounded by men who will claim to have made instant him what he is; and who, instead of sinking into the position of followers, will consider themselves as elevated with him, not by him; and as dependent not upon his will, but upon the will of the party which has raised him: and who will claim the right not merely to advise him as friends, but to decide with him as equals, upon the policy and measures of the

"We study then the propable action of the Executive, not through the personal character of the President, but through the designs, the principles, the temper, and the predominating ideas of the party which he leads. In all ordinary cases it is idle to expect that he will attempt to be other than what his party wish him, or that he will seek to escape from a control, wherein consists his security and his strength. It is, then, as the representative, especially, of the Northern Whig Party, that we have opposed the election of Gen. Taylor. We do not so designate him, because we think him their natural or their voluntary representative, but because they adopted him as such, gets eight non-slaveholding States and Taylor tober, 1848, was increased $10,756 16; this advocated him as such, and voted for him as

"This feature of the Presidential election, is indeed a most striking one. That the whole Northern Whig Party, avowing vociferously, throughout the canvass, the strongest anti-slavery sentiments, and claiming, not through obscure newspapers, but by their whole press, by the declarations of their first statesmen, and by the considerate resolves of State Conventions, that they were the true, and only true, Free Soil Party, and the only consistent, because the only prudent and effective, enemies to the growth & power of the Southern States -that this party, we say, should have presented an unbroken front, and given an almost unanimous and cordial support to a slaveholder and a cotton planter, is one of those extraordinary results in politics, calculated to rivet the attention and excite the wonder of men. To the Northern Whig Party, anti-slavery has evidently been a principle of union and strength. To the Democratic Party, on the contrary, it has been a fountain of bitterness, of intestine strife, of destroying factions, and humiliating defeat. The wonder is, not that the Whig Party, completely united in principle, should have triumphed, but that they could possibly have adopted as the bond of their union, as the title of their faith, as the emblem of their cause, as the star of their hope, a man, whose birth, life, position and associations, seemed to place between him and them an impassable gulf.

"By what means they hoped to melt down these rugged differences, and to convert a slaveholder into a convenient instrument for executing the designs of an anti-slavery party, we do not propose now to examine. That they had such hopes, we know from their own express and loudly repeated declarations, and we know it by the far stronger demonstration of their vote at the Prosidential election. It cannot be denied, it would be worse than idle to deny, that the Northern Whig Party have sustained General Taylor on anti-slavery grounds; and that they confidently look, not only for his consent, but for his aid, in settling the Territorial question, on expectations, and that a refusal on his part. if Gen. Taylor shall fulfil the hopes and pledges | Covington, Whig. of his Southern friends, it seems almost ine- "Four and thirty blackbirds all in a row." the division of the people of the United States New York all are whigh and abolitionists—

If on the other hand, he shall fulfil the hopes and pledges of his Northern supporters, the Government of the country must be, throughout his term of office, a Northern Administration, with anti-slavery as its animating spirit and the prostration and ruin of the South as its leading object. In every aspect, therefore, the administration of Gen. Taylor presents a subject of speculation full of perplexity, and one cannot look forward to it but as a theatre of great events, and possibly of a fatal catastrophe. In such an exigency, there are higher duties than party consistency; and the safety of our country demands that we shall judge of the coming Administration, not by preconceived opinions, but by its acts, by its

NORTH-CAROLINA. 33-We do not think it worth while to encumber our columns with our table of returns to-day. As soon as we receive the official returns, we shall publish them. There has been 58 counties heard from, which shew that the State has voted for Taylor and Fillmore by a large majority. We agree with the Raleigh Standard, that "In all sincerity we anticipated a different result; but the deed has been done, and regrets for the past are unavailing. We must pick our flints and try again. Eighteen months will determine who is right and who is wrong in this matter. Beyond all question—and no Whig need deny t, for it is so-Gen. Taylor was supported in the North on the ground that he would approve the Wilmot Proviso, and in the South on the ground that he would veto it; and such being the case, one section or the other must and will be deceived. Such an Administration as Gen. Taylor's is bound to be, cannot stand.— Within twelve months from the 4th of next March, if indeed he should live to attempt to carry out the will of a majority of Congress, his Administration will be shaken to its foundations; and many of those who have voted for him, and who have shouted for him as the unsurpassed hero and soldier, will curse him and repudiate him with all the bitterness which springs from disappointed hopes and expectations. We hope for the best, but we must confess we apprehend great and serious dan-

For the Journal. Mr. Editor:-The agony is over! Taylor and Fillmore are the choice of the people. For this result, we should not care to indulge any foolish regrets. The nominees of our party are beaten as they were in 1840, "fully if not fairly." The will of the majority is against to bow in submission, if not with respect. It is perfectly natural, however, under the circumstances, that we should be allowed to sav. that we are somewhat mortified in being called upon, for the second time in eight years, to attribute our defeat to the influence of a wild. thoughtless excitement, gotten up to lead the public mind astray from principle. There is this satisfaction, however, even in a conclusion, so unpleasant to every genuine Republican, that the result was beyond the ordinary reach of mere party association, and can in no

MR. EDITOR-Enough has been heard to convince us that Gen. Zachary Taylor is elected President of the United States. What base design of prostrating my character for new convictions such a fact forces upon us! at an early hour this morning, after a passage To what policy the people have committed of less than 11 days. Her advices are one themselves, and how, under existing circumstances, it is our duty to act, I propose now briefly to inquire?

We believe that the entire Democratic mind of the country gave its cheerful assent to the first resolution of the Baltimore Convention: Resolved, That the American Democracy place their trust in the intelligence, the patriotism, and the discriminative justice of the us, and to that will we should always be ready American people." How painful, then, the consciousness forced upon it now, that the people have literally run mad "with a wild and reckless enthusiasm for mere military renown," and that they form no exception to the remark of Gen. Cass, that "from the earliest period of the development of the pugnacious power, mankind have been more or less the passionate admirers of military renown, and the dupes of military glory."

No man will have the impudence to say that approval has been expressed of any single measure that formerly characterized the way be regarded as a test of the popularity of Whig party. sufferings of ragged and hungry Genius, as told by the sufferers themselves in Johnson's Life of Savage and in Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, will listen to the following letter addressed to a distinguished gentleman in this country, a chapter of autobiography, with like interest; for like those narratives, it not only describes the trials, but is written, also, with the energetic pen of Genius.

The writer is Mr. J. R. Remington, a young man, a Virginian by birth. After residing fo went to Washington, and exhibited there the models and drawings of several ingenious and (as they have since proved) valuable mechan ical inventions of his own. At Washington he made little headway. One of his inventions was a bridge, constructed on a novel principle, or rather a principle newly, and by which bridges of timber of great length can be thrown across rivers and wide railroad cuts and admired; but somehow, although they saw much that was strictly original, they could not see how the contrivances were to be made practically useful. Fulton's first steamboat drew crowds of such admirers around it when it was on the stocks.

Mr. Remington was not discouraged He went to England, arriving in London early in January, 1847. He went, to use his striking language, in " search of a man;" like the old philosopher, he sought but for one He carried with him his plans, a teeming brain, a letter of introduction, and an empty purse.

The story of Mr. Remington's success has been told by the lips of others, as was meet: we leave it to himself to describe his strugg es and probation. His letter would be marred by any any attempt on our part to add or am-

STAFFORD, ENGLAND, Aug. 15, 1848.

My DEAR SIR:-I should have written soonreached London on the first of January, 1847, without money or friends, which was just the thing I desired when I left America, and just him, exclaimed, "Darn your apologies-you the thing, I assure you, I shall never desire again. I commenced operations at once, on the in' and scrapin'—you did it a purpose, dan supposition that, in this overgrown city, I would at least enlist one man. But Englishmen are not Americans. An Englishman will advance any amount on an absolute certainty, but not one penny where there is the slightest risk, if he got the whole world by it. I spent the first five months looking for this man with unparalleled perseverance and industry, living for less than three pence per day. I am convinced that few persons in London know so much of that incomprehensibly large city as myself. But alas, my wardrobe was gone to supply me with wretchedly baked corn bread, on which I lived entirely. I slept on straw for which I paid a half penny per night. became ragged and filthy, and could no longer go among men of business. Up to this time my sufferings were great. My limbs distor ted by rheumatism, induced by cold and ex posure-my face and head swelled to a mos unnatural size with cold and toothache, and those who slept in the same horrid den as myself were wretched street beggars, the very cleanest of them literally alive with all man-

My head turned grey, and I must have died but for the Jews, who did give me one shilling down for my acknowledgment for £10 on demand. These wicked robberies have amounted to several hundred pounds, ev. ery penny of which I have had to pay subse. quently; for, since my success at Stafford, no a man in England who can read, but knows my address. It cost me £10 to abtain the shilling with which I paid my admittance into the Royal Zoological gardens, where I succee. ded, after much mortification, in getting the ghost of a model made of the bridge. The model, although a bad one, astonished every body. Every engineer of celebrity in London was called in to decide whether it was practicable to throw it across the lake. Four or five of them, at the final decision, declared that the model before them was passing strange, but that it could not be carried to much greater length than the length of the I was standing amidst men of the supposed greatest talents as civil engineen the world could produce, and the point decided against me. This one time alone were my whole energies aroused. I never talked before-I was haggard and faint for want of food-my spirits sunk in sorrow in view of my mournful prospects-clothes I had none-yet standing over this model, did I battle with those men. Every word I uttered came from my inmost soul, was big with truth-erers argument carried conviction. The effect of those men was like magic-indeed, they men have been devils not to have believed under the circumstances. I succeeded. My agreement with the proprietor was, that I should superintend the construction of the bridge vithout any pay whatever, but during the time of the building I might sleep in the Gar. dens, and if the bridge should succeed, it should be called "Remington's Bridge."

I lodged in an old lion's cage, not strong e. lough for a lion, but by putting some straw on the floor, held me very well, and indeed was a greater luxury than I had for months The carpenters that worked on the bridge cometimes gave me part of their dinner. On this I lived, and was comparatively happy. It was a little novel, however, to see a man in rags directing gentlemanly looking carpenters
